What We Offer

- Counseling and support services to maximize your independence and understanding of what you can accomplish despite vision loss. We provide the tools, skills, and support to help you pursue education, job training and employment.
- Residential, day, and/or virtual classes through the McDowell Center in Louisville designed to teach you specific skills for daily life and career including Braille, technology, independent living, job readiness, travel with a white cane, and related programs and support services.
- In-home services to teach you how to use phones, tablets and computers, meal preparation, housekeeping, access print information, and other important life tasks without relying on vision.
- Orientation & Mobility evaluations and training with Certified O&M Specialists to teach you a variety of skills, including how to use a white cane, to help you get around safely and confidently.
- Bioptic driving assessment and training for eligible/qualified candidates.

Who We Work With

- Adults wanting a job and needing the alternative techniques, career readiness skills, or assistive technology to be successful in their chosen field.
- Individuals losing vision and wanting to remain independent in their homes and communities.
- Teens wanting to get ready for the workforce.
